It was the summer fair at school soon. Kit and Sam were thinking about what they would like to sell at their stall.

“I am going to do some baking,” said Kit.

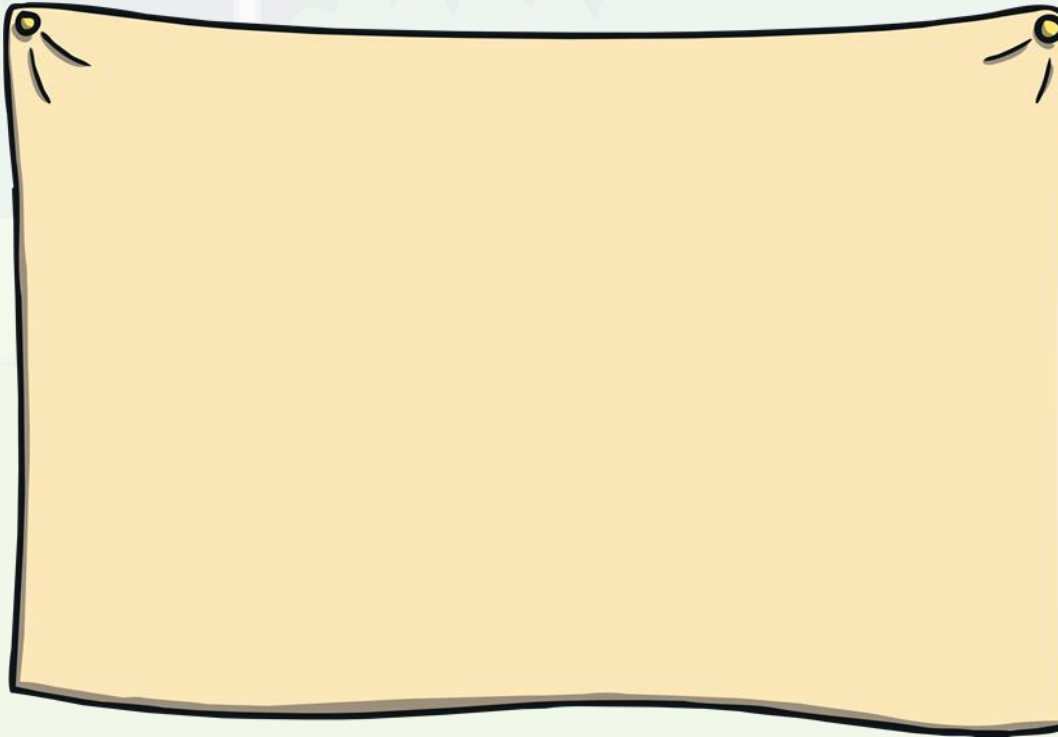

“I am going to make some wooden chairs to sell,” said Sam. “We better get started!” said Mum and Dad.

Sam went with Dad to the shed. They measured the wood for the chairs. “These pieces are longer,” said Dad. “You will need to saw them. This pair of pieces are shorter, you will need to hammer them.” Sam and Dad made lots of chairs.

Kit added the pure butter and the buns were soon baked. As they cooled, Kit sniffed the air. "I think I should try one just to make sure they are OK," he said. "All right," said Mum, "you can try one after dinner. Just one though, there will be none left for the fair otherwise!" she laughed.
